

---

Hot Salaries In Project Management

The world of work is changing and with it comes the need for project managers who know what they're doing and who can bring their project in on time and on budget.

The trend to project work is not new the building & construction sector and IT have been doing it for a few years now but, it ramped up a notch or two in 2012 – 13 when the Banking and Financial sector took it on board and now the trend has become the new way of work with Construction, mining and resources and the Banking and Financial Sectors leading the way other sectors hard on their heels include Healthcare, Aged Care and Oil and Gas.

As predicted the salaries for project managers have risen accordingly with:

- Experienced project managers in IT earning from $140 – 190k
- Project Manager in construction earning from $165 – 300K
- Project Manager Mining and Resources $260 – 370K
- Project manager Banking & financial services $120 – 180k

And, if you're serious about PM as a career well, as you progress up the ladder:

- A PMO Manager earns between $150 – 240k annually.<sup>1</sup>

The list is also set to grow as more specialist PM skills such as stakeholder management & procurement will be in high demand.

So why not consider a move into Project Management and take the weight off your back and into your wallet instead!

To date, just three companies have received a strike in this year's AGM season, and it's all down to better shareholder engagement.

Helen Sabell
The College for Adult Learning

---

<sup>1</sup> Robert Walters Global Salary Survey 2014 Australia (pp 201-272)